THE RELEVANCE OF HOMA / YAGYA

Agnihoma or yagya is one of the five important duties and a daily ritual to be performed by every householder regularly. The ago-old scriptures of India refer to it by various names-deva yagya, haves and homa. It is interesting to note that the term homa sounds similar to the word 'homa' in English. Perhaps it is to suggest that a house can be called so only if homa is performed there everyday!

Agni or fire is one of the 5 elements, which is as important as the other four namely sky, water, earth and wind. It is very difficult to imagine a life without Agni. Even in these modern times, we can see it playing a major role in our day-to-day lives, for almost all the gadgets we use today are driven by Agni-directly or indirectly. Our seers and sages of olden times understood the potential of Agni and used it as a medium in all the rituals to reach out to the universe around. They saw it as a fine mechanism to cleanse the air both indoor and outdoor.

It is common knowledge that the effect of any material or substance increases by a million times when it acquires the atom-like form than it was in its solid form. Rishis of Vedic period recommended herbs that are health givers, anti-bacterials and aromatic deodorants as ideal substances for adding to the sacrificial fire.

The intake of these herbal substances in the gaseous state through the nostrils is better than consuming them directly through the mouth in solid or liquid forms.

Agnihoma or yagya is, in essence, all about converting certain substances into vapour state by burning them in the sacrificial fire. These vapourised substances spread to every nook and corner and enhance the quality of air around us. Thus it is seen the benefits of Agnihoma go well beyond the person performing it and enable everybody around him to enjoy them.

This is very well proved when thousands of people died in the union carbide gas leak disaster in the year 1985, four (or) five families living near Bhopal railway station, survived in the above disaster only because they have been performing Agnihoma regularly for several generations now.

It is proven fact that Agnihoma can pave way for overall development in the physical, mental, intellectual and spiritual domains. Doing them regularly as enjoined in the scriptures will bring a word of prosperity, peace, knowledge, health and success. It will ensure a conflict-free life and increase the positive vibrations around you.
